At Sailing Byte, we help businesses streamline operations through software solutions. We provide custom software development, website development, application management and support, IT consulting, and more. Since 2017, we've been helping small businesses all over the world with their custom integration and maintenance needs. We are focused on delivering high-quality and secure products that achieve positive results.

What is Clutch and why do we use it?

To reach a wider audience, we recently joined Clutch, the leading B2B reviews and ratings platform.

Based in the heart of Washington, DC, Clutch aims to help businesses of all sizes identify and connect with the agencies they need to achieve their goals. They cover diverse industries, such as IT, advertising, and marketing, and their team of analysts conducts in-depth interviews with clients about the quality of their engagement with service providers. Clutch also carefully creates lists of the market leaders by industry and location, to enable companies to establish credibility and to allow buyers to find the right provider.

That said, we're excited to announce that we've received our very first review on the platform!

The review came from a Polish telemedicine company. We were recommended to the client, and we helped them with their software integration project.

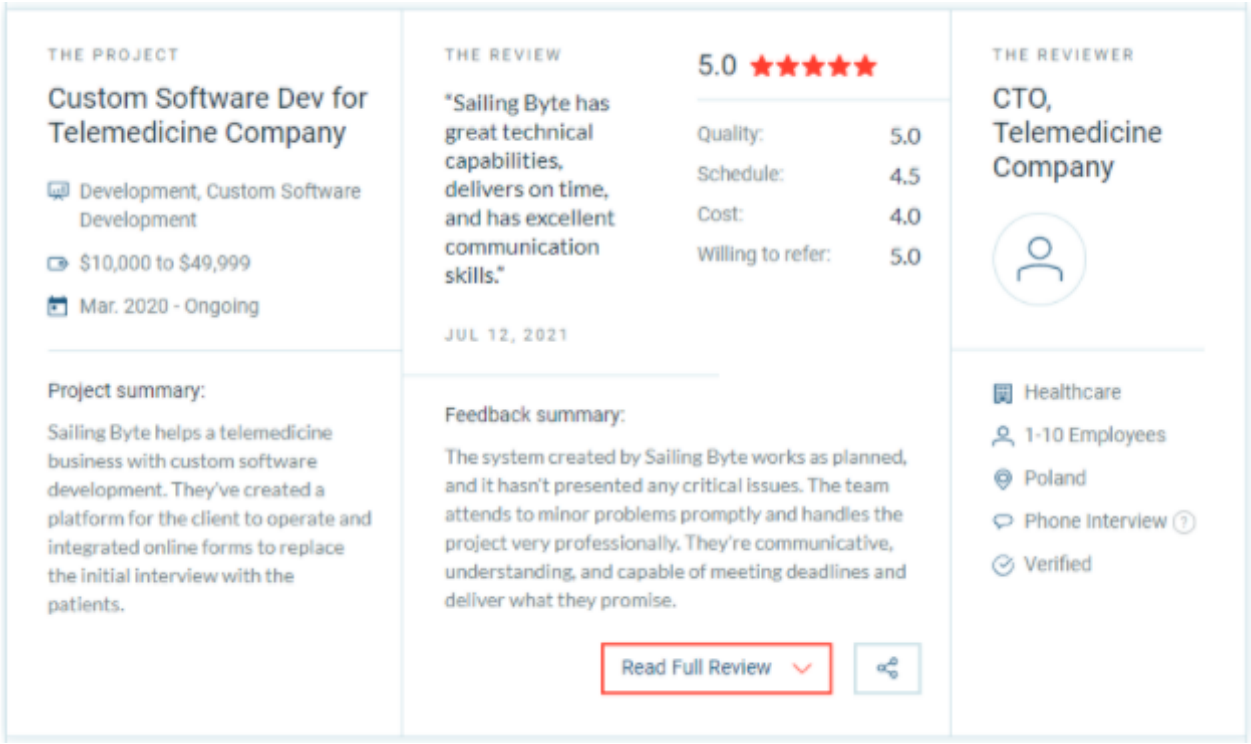

We started the project by discussing the client's idea of how the system should run. After that, we proceeded with the development. The platform included an electronic form for a patient's initial interview. We deployed five developers to work on the project. We started working together in March 2020, and our collaboration is ongoing.

The client is delighted with our partnership! The system we developed worked as intended, and it never had any critical errors. The client praised our responsive and collaborative approach. In addition, they were impressed with our project management skills.

"First of all, Sailing Byte does what they say they would do," said the CTO of the telemedicine company. "Secondly, the quality of their communication and understanding is very good. They're always on top of our discussions. Their third strength is that they have a very professional way of handling things, and they always go straight to the point."

As such, due to the success of our engagement, the client gave us an overall rating of five stars!

In addition, we've been featured on the Manifest as a Top Blockchain Developer in Poland! Clutch's sister website, the Manifest is a company listing site that analyzes and compiles industry data. The platform features a notable project from various service providers to showcase their industry expertise and ability to deliver. We're proud to be featured on the Manifest as a leading agency!

We thank our client for taking the time to leave our very first review on the platform. We appreciate their honest and thoughtful feedback about our work. Moreover, their positive review affirms our excellence in IT development and our commitment to our client's success.
